

Happy New Year!

From Your Friends at

ULTRA SIMPLE CROCK POT WHITE CHICKEN CHILI

This is the EASIEST white chicken chili slow cooker recipe you will ever see. Dump, dump, dump, cook for 4 hours with stirring once or twice in the middle. You are rewarded for your laziness with a great chili and all your friends will demand the recipe.

- 1 -48 oz jar great northern beans
- 3 cups shredded chicken
- 1 cup medium salsa
- 8 oz pepper jack cheese, cubed
- 2 tsp cumin
- 1 - 14 oz can chicken broth (optional)

1. Cube 8 oz of pepper jack cheese.
2. In a small crock pot dump one 48 oz jar great northern beans (un-drained), 8 oz of salsa, 3 cups of shredded chicken, 2 tsp cumin and 8 oz of pepper jack cheese (cubed).
3. Add a 14 oz can of chicken broth if you want a normal thick chili. Leave it out for extra thick. Stir very well.
4. Cook on low for 4 hours. Try to stir once or twice in the middle if you can to distribute the cheese but it can wait until the end if needed.

And You Thought YOUR New Year's Eve Was Crazy, Jonathan!

Whether your New Year was a black tie and ball gown affair, a bowl of popcorn and PJs gig, or a wild night you hope won't live on in infamy on your friends' Facebook posts, you'd be hard pressed to beat these crazy rituals. From fortune-telling fowl to gobbling grapes, here are some of the wackiest ways of welcoming the New Year around the world:

PHILIPPINES: Wearing polka dots and eating round fruits supposedly rings in a prosperous coming year (wonder what would happen if we tried bananas??).

SPAIN: If you find yourself in Spain, be sure to wolf down handfuls of grapes at the stroke of midnight (again with the round fruits!)

SOUTH AFRICA: Look out for falling.... appliances?! Tradition in Johannesburg is to toss old ones out the window at midnight.

DENMARK: More flying kitchenware here

- Danes celebrate by chucking old china and glassware at the doors of friends and family. (We'd hate to see what they do to their enemies!)

BELARUS: This one's for the all the single ladies out there - unmarried women in Belarus play a game to see who will marry in the coming year. A pile of corn is placed in front of each woman and a rooster released - whichever pile he approaches first flags the woman who will marry. (You better believe roosters live WELL in Belarus!)
